Railway and Busses

HIGH SPEED

ELECTRIC CAR SERVICE

TO THE BEACHES

Doubters and disbelievers in the forward march of progress, as well as the customary croakers and pessimists who remain blinded to any innovation of improvement, may now quietly fold up their tents, cease their clamor and silently slink away in recognition of an official statement this week from the state railroad commission authorizing the San Diego Electric Railway company to suspend street car service on the Old Town line on the condition that the railway would establish a regular motor bus service instead.

The railway company also was authorized to suspend service on a section of the Ocean Beach line upon condition of the establishment of a new high speed railway service, augmented by a motor bus service on Voltaire street.

Thus mote it be!

And it will be done!!

Yea, and quite soon, too!!!

SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

BY HER HUSBAND

Mrs. Arnold Smith was seriously wounded last Sunday by the accidental discharge of a shotgun carried by her husband while on an outing trip with a party of friends. Mrs. Smith received a number of perforations in the intestines and has been transferred to St. Joseph's hospital, where her husband and family are in constant atetndance. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were married last December and until quite recently lived on Niagara avenue near DeFoe street. Mrs. Smith is reported to be slowly recovering from her injuries. Prior to her marriage she was very popular among the younger set as Beulah Taylor, sister of Mrs. Harold Reama, both being daughters of Contractor Taylor of Winder street, San Diego.

The O. B. Lumber Co. on Newport avenue, now carries a new line of Gold Band CROCKERY WARE, very reasonable—come and look them over—no trouble to show them.

SIGN-ARTIST BROWN

DECORATES ROOMS FOR

DR. J. EDWARD CASTIEN

At his new location in rooms 16-17, Sefton building, Fifth and C streets, San Diego, Dr. J. Edward Castein, the well known optician, has arranged most suitable conveniences for all patrons desiring first class optometrical attention. A comfortable reception room adjoins his professional quarters and the entire suite has been tastefully treated in soft congenial color tones.

The very attractive interior was decorated by C. Townsend Brown, the artist sign-painter, who has also executed some especially fine work on the lettering of the doors and windows. Paraphrasing the apt slogan adopted by Dr. Castien, it is quite appropriate to say that "it will do your EYES good to see the signs on the Castien windows and portals."

A Valentine
O HEART of me! Dear heart of me!
Though flamed with love your shrine-fires glow,
How can you breathe your ecstasy?
How can you fond devotion show?
The day is here for tender song—
The music of a lover's vow.
To cupid all the hours belong,
'Tis time to whisper secrets now!

FOR CARLSBAD GAME

NEXT SUNDAY

Ocean Beach is climbing upward in the North County League percentage column, and the regular bunch of boosters will get a big run for their money by journeying to Carlsbad for the first game scheduled there by the local team on next Sunday. Go along and take a friend or two.

LOCAL TEAM WHIPS

NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE

In a fast game on the local diamond the O. B. club smeared the Neighborhood House team with defeat by a score of five to three. The rival twirlers, Vitek and Castro, pitched a great game, with our own Vitek having a shade the best of it on his opponents. A home run marked the big batting feature.

Troop 61 of the Ocean Beach school is having final tenderfoot examination this week. The troop will also make application for charter some time during the month to national headquarters.

The progressiveness of the newer Pacific Beach marked the splendid entertainment given at the Pacific Beach schoolhouse last week-end, under the auspices of the P. B. Community League, for the purpose of raising funds for the local Boy Scout troop and the La Jolla high school orchestra.

The affair proved a decided success, both in performance and in attendance. Inspiring speeches were made by H. A. Hodge, H. L. Owens and Carl S. Clark, relative to a "bigger and better Pacific Beach," while an excellently diversified program was furnished in the way of exhibitions by the local Boy Scout troop; selections by the La Jolla high school orchestra; songs by Mrs. May Negley, a recitation by Mrs. Lizzie Martin, a dance by Misses Dorothy Durham and Laverna Lawrence, a pageant by the Girl Scouts and "the burial of Old Pacific Beach."

FIRST NIGHT VACANT

Entering by a rear door some unknown person or persons has broken all the windows in the residence of the late Harry Wood at 4760 Santa Cruz avenue. Since the demise of her brother, some months ago, Miss Maud Wood of Chicago, had been living in the house and the smashing of the windows occurred on the night of the day she returned to the midwestern metropolis. The residence had been tenantless only a few hours and word has been sent to Miss Wood about the damage done to the property following her departure. Considerable stir has been caused in the neighborhood over the unusual affair and the police are following quite a definite clue that may lead to somewhat sensational developments in the event of the case coming to the attention of the courts.

A UNIVERSAL SUPER-JEWEL

"Good Morrow To You, My Valentine!"

MANY curious old charms are said to be potent on St. Valentine's eve—all, like most charms ever invented, connected with the procuring of husbands. Even before surplus woman dawned on the scene, this seems to have been a subject of much anxiety.

Five bay leaves, pinned respectively to the four corners and the center of the pillow, are said to bring certain dreams of the future partner, if the sleeper has gone to bed without eating or speaking.

Another infallible spell was to write the names of admirers on separate pieces of paper, enclose them in clay balls and throw them into water. The one which came to the surface first contained the name of the fated spouse.

It is a sign of great good luck if the swain you favor should be the first man seen on February 14. The modern girl who does not pin her faith entirely to signs and omens, can always practice the ruse of a shrewd maiden of long ago, who, knowing where her heart had gone, "lay a-bed and shut my eyes all the morning till 'he' came, for I would not have seen another man before him for all the world."

She was far-seeing and lucky. But if she had set eyes first on the wrong man, she would have wedded him, so a poet tells us:—

"Last Valentine, the day when birds of kind
Their paramours with mutual chirpings find, . . .
Afield I went, amid the morning dew,
To milk my kine (for so should housewives do),
Thee first I spied, and the first swain we see,
In spite of fortune, shall our true love be."

Some of us wish that a quaint old custom practiced in the time of Pepys was still prevalent—the rule that a man must give a present to the first woman he saw on February 14. Pepys, gay old rascal that he was, much bewailed himself that his own tribute had to be offered to his wife—a proceeding he considered very dull, when there were plenty of pretty young girls at the light-hearted court of Charles II.

Old people still remember the time when valentines were as popular as Christmas cards, and the postman groaned under his load on the morning of the 14th. This is still the case in the United States, but the idea of courtship is no longer much connected with these bright cards.

Nowadays Shakespeare's greeting:—

"Good morrow, 'tis St. Valentine's day,
All the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your valentine."

simply reminds us of the passing of a delightful old custom.

Christianity brought the custom of placing each feast day under the patronage of a saint, and so St. Valentine, who never married himself, became the patron saint of lovers.—The Lady's Companion.

For Your Valentine Party

"GRACIOUS goodness," said Cupid, looking at the calendar, "here I am sitting around and dawdling hours away when it's my busiest time in the whole year." "James," he cried, "bring me that quiver of arrows and the polish. I've got to get ready for St. Valentine's day!"

And while Cupid is busy getting ready for his annual archery program, there are plenty of others who are preparing to receive him, fortifying themselves against his invasion or preparing a fitting welcome, as the case may be.

Naturally, nobody wants to take a chance with this skillful archer without plenty of others present to help deflect his flying arrows, so there will be parties, parties, and then more parties.

First, a Valentine party calls for a clever form of invitation. A verse—original if possible—could set forth the wish of the hostess in an appropriate jingle, running something like this:

I beg to indite that a gay little sprite,
Will stop at my home on St. Valentine's night:
Can you meet him at eight, on this special date,
I'm expecting you over so please don't be late.

Another invitation might read:

On Saint Valentine's Day
Will you come to my party?
I'll see that you have
A welcome right hearty.

The verse can be written on dainty Valentine postcards, or correspondence cards ornamented with Cupids and arrows or with red heart seals.

Another verse may invite the guest in this wise:

The Sign-of-the-Heart is pleased to invite
Your presence at eight on Saint Valentine's Night;
Hearts that are brave and loving and true
Will be ready and waiting to welcome you.
The password is Love, which alone has the power
To gain you admittance to Cupid's bower.

Note paper decorated with Valentine seals could be used for this form of invitation. For a decoration to conform to the first line of the verse, an immense red heart, hung against the glass of the front door would be appropriate.

Old-fashioned valentines, with lace paper and sentimental verses, make appropriate invitations. So do the old comics.

The valentine party rarely takes the form of a masquerade, but the hostess usually plans caps and favors for the guests, to give a festive air to the event.

Almost any crude cap of crepe paper can be made highly decorative by adding long tassels or fringe at either side.

Heavy necklaces of cardboard with a ruffle of red crepe paper hung about the neck on a ribbon are effective and easily made.

The jazz bracelet is a novelty consisting of a ribbon, to be worn about the wrist, with long red and white crepe paper streamers.

POPULAR YOUNG COUPLE UNITED IN MATRIMONY AT PRETTY HOME WEDDING

Idealistically impressive, amid a most delightful domestic atmosphere, Miss Ruth Insley, one of the fairest buds of Ocean Beach, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to James W. Brott last Saturday evening, February 2nd, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Insley of 4650 Del Monte avenue.

Leaning upon the arm of her father, the bride entered the living room at the appointed hour of 7:30 o'clock, while the groom was attended by Howard Herbst of Long Beach as best man, and also by Preston Humason of San Diego.

An exceptionally artistic setting lent a wonderful charm to the scene of the home wedding, ferns and lilies forming an attractive wall background in the room, which was handsomely decorated with American beauty roses and ferns.

The bridal pair stood under a beautiful wedding bell during the marriage ceremony, which was solemnized by Dr. E. Herbert Hayden, pastor of the First Baptist church, in the presence of a large number of admiring friends and relatives.

The bride was exquisitely gowned in white crepe de chine and satin. The bridal veil was edged with Duchesse point lace and was caught with a wreath of orange blosoms in a pretty head dress. The bewitching bride carried a shower bouquet of Cecil Brunner roses, liles of the valley and maiden-hair fern.

Miss Mildred Moore, a cousin of the bride, made a charming bridesmaid, attired in blue and rose changeable taffeta, with silver head-dress. Helen Gleave, formerly of Ocean Beach and an old school chum of the bride, was a lovely maid of honor, dressed in orchid and green changeable taffeta, with head-dress of silver. They both carried beautiful bouquets of sweet peas with tulle ribbons. Little Miss Marion Roy made a dainty flower girl, dressed in blue cashmere, and little Miss Florence Close proved a very cute ring bearer, dressed in orchid voile.

Just previous to the ceremony, Miss Mildred Moore most effectively sang "I Love You Truly," and following the nuptial vows, she gave a very impressive rendition of "Because," being splendidly accompanied by Mrs. Juanita Close.

During the joyful evening, a delicious buffet lunch was most graciously served by the Misses Audra Evans, Marion Gleave and Willamartha Farrington. A magnificent wedding cake was cut by the bride and distributed to everyone present, each portion being encased in a neat wreath-embossed box, tied with white satin ribbon. Mrs. Amy Cunningham ably supervised the general decorations.

The local guests included Mr. and Mrs. William Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. George Farington, Mrs. A. E. Gray, Mrs. Kirk Smith ("Katherine") all of Ocean Beach. Those present from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Collier of Camp Kearny; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gleave, of Huntington Beach; Mr. G. Dabney, of Los Angeles; Mrs. Martha Insley, grandmother of the bride, of Huntington Beach; Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Roy and children of San Pedro.

The bride is the only girl in the Insley family and has been a popular resident of Ocean Beach for the past nine years. She is a graduate of the local school and also attended high school in San Diego.

James W. Brott, the bridegroom, is the son of Mrs. Clara Rowland of St. Joseph, Mo. He is at present connected with the finance department, U. S. army, being assigned to temporary duty at Rockwell Field, Coronado.

Mr. and Mrs. Brott started on their wedding tour amidst a shower of rice, and will be at home after February 15th, at their future residence with the bride's parents in Ocean Beach.

Fortune From a Dollar.

Mr. A. I. Root, who has died at Medina, Ohio, built up a business now valued at many thousands of pounds owing to a four-shilling investment made by way of a joke.

In his earlier years he was a watchmaker, and one day, while chatting with a workman outside his place of business, a swarm of bees flew overhead. Young Root was interested, and the other asked how much he would offer for the swarm.

Mr. Root offered a dollar, and to his astonishment the man returned in a short time with the bees in a box. Mr. Root paid the dollar, took his bees, and started bee-keeping as an amateur. Later he devoted all his time to bees, and now there are Root company branches for the supply of honey and bee appliances all over America.—London Tit-Bits.

The BROWN MOUSE

By HERBERT QUICK

(Copyright by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Jennie Woodruff contemptuously refuses to marry Jim Irwin, young farm hand, because of his financial condition and poor prospects. He is intellectually above his station, and has advanced ideas concerning the possibilities of expert school teaching, for which he is ridiculed by many.

CHAPTER II.—More as a joke than otherwise Jim is selected as teacher of the Woodruff district school.

CHAPTER III.—Jim, in his new position, sets out to make stanch friends of his pupils, especially two boys, Newton Bronson and "Buddy" Simms, the latter the son of a shiftless farmer. Colonel Woodruff, Jennie's father, has little faith in Jim's ideas of improving rural educational methods. He nicknames him the "Brown Mouse," in illustration of an anecdote.

CHAPTER IV.—Jim's conduct of the school, where he endeavors to teach the children the wonders of nature and some of the scientific methods of farming, as well as "book learning," is condemned.

CHAPTER V.—Jennie Woodruff is nominted for the position of county superintendent of schools. The school board grows bitter in its opposition to Jim and his innovations.

CHAPTER VI.—At a public meeting Jim roundly condemns the methods of teaching in the rural schools, and makes no friends thereby.

Mrs. Bonner seemed unprepared for the question, and sat for an instant mute. Mrs. Peterson interposed her attack while Mrs. Bonner might be recovering her wind.

"We Object to the Way the Teachin's Being Done."

"We people that have had a hard time," she said in a precise way which seemed to show that she knew exactly what she wanted, "don't want our children taught about nothing but work. We want our children to learn nice things, and go to high school, and after a while to the Juniwersity."

"Aren't your children happy in school, Mrs. Peterson?"

"I don't send them to school to be happy, Yim," replied Mrs. Peterson, calling him by the name most familiarly known to all of them; "I send them to learn to be higher people than their father and mother. That's what America means!"

"They'll be higher people—higher than their parents—higher than their teacher—they'll be efficient farmers, and efficient farmers' wives. They'll be happy, because they will know how to use more brains in farming than any lawyer or doctor or merchant can possibly use in his business."

"It's a fine thing," said Mrs. Bonner, coming to the aid of her fellow soldiers, "to work hard for a lifetime, an' raise nothing but a family of farmers! A fine thing!"

"They will be farmers anyhow," cried Jim, "in spite of your efforts—ninety out of every hundred of them! And of the other ten, nine will be wage-earners in the cities, and wish to God they were back on the farm; and the hundredth one will succeed in the city."

The guns of Mrs. Bonner and Mrs. Peterson were silenced for a moment, and Mrs. Bronson, after gazing about at the typewriter, the hecktograph, the exhibits of weed seeds, the Babcock milk tester, and the other unscholastic equipment, pointed to the list of words, and the arithmetic problems on the board.

"Do you get them words from the speller?" she asked.

"No," said he, "we get them from a lesson on seed wheat."

"Did them examples come out of an arithmetic book?" cross-examined she.

"No," said Jim, "we used problems we made ourselves. We were figuring profits and losses on your cows, Mrs. Bronson!"

"Ezra Bronson," said Mrs. Bronson loftily, "don't need any help in telling what's a good cow. He was farming before you was born!"

"Like fun, he don't need help! He's going to dry old Cherry off and fatten her for beef; and he can make more money on the cream by beefing about three more of 'em. The Babcock test shows they're just boarding on us without paying their board!"

The delegation of matrons ruffled like a group of startled hens at this interposition, which was Newton Bronson's effective seizing of the opportunity to issue a progress bulletin in the research work on the Bronson dairy herd.

"Newton!" said his mother, "don't interrupt me when I'm talking to the teacher!"

"Well, then," said Newton, "don't tell the teacher that pa knew which cows were good and which were poor. If any one in this district wants to know about their cows they'll have to come to this shop. And I can tell you that it'll pay 'em to come, too, if they're going to make anything selling cream. Wait until we get out our reports on the herds, ma!"

The women were rather stampeded by this onslaught of the irregular troops—especially Mrs. Bronson. She felt a flutter of pride in her son, but it was strongly mingled with a motherly desire to spank him. The deputation rose, with a unanimous feeling that they had been scored upon.

"Cows!" scoffed Mrs. Peterson. "If we leove you in this yob, Mr. Irwin, our children will know nothing but cows and hens and soils and grains—and where will the culture come in?"

"Culture!" exclaimed Jim. "Why—why, after ten years of the sort of school I would give you if I were a better teacher and could have my way—"

"Don't bother, Jim," said Mrs. Bonner sneeringly, "you won't be teaching the Woodruff school that long."

All this time, the dark-faced Cracker had been glooming from a corner, earnestly seeking to fathom the wrongness he sensed in the gathering. Now he came forward.

"I reckon I may be making a mistake to say anything," said he, "f'r we-all is strangers hyeh, an' we're pore; but I must speak out for Mr. Jim—I must! Don't turn him out, folks, f'r he's done mo' f'r us than eveh any one done in the world!"

"What do you mean?" asked Mrs. Peterson.

"I mean," said Raymond, "that when Mr. Jim began talking school to us, we was a pore no-'count lot without any learnin', with nothin' to talk about except our wrongs, an' our enemies, and the meanness of the Iowa folks. You see we didn't understand you-all. An' now, we have hope. We done got hope from this school. We're goin' to make good in the world. We're getting education. We're all learnin' to use books. My little sister will be as good as anybody, if you'll just let Mr. Jim alone in this school—as good as any one. An' I'll he'p pap get a farm, and we'll work and think at the same time, an' be happy!"

CHAPTER VIII

Miss Jennie Woodruff of the Woodruff district was a sensible country girl. Being sensible, she tried to avoid uppishness. But she did feel some little sense of increased importance as she drove her father's little runabout over the smooth earth roads, in the crisp December weather, just before Christmas. The weather itself was stimulating, and in the little car, visiting the one hundred or more rural schools soon to come under her supervision, she rather fancied the picture of herself, clothed in more or less authority and queening it over her little army of teachers.

Mr. Haakon Peterson was phlegmatically conscious that she made rather an agreeable picture, as she stopped her car alongside his top buggy to talk with him. She had bright blue eyes, fluffy brown hair, a complexion whipped pink by the breeze, and she smiled at him ingratiatingly.

"Don't you think father is lovely?" said she. "He is going to let me use the runabout when I visit the schools."

"That will be good," said Haakon. "It will save you lots of time. I hope you make the county pay for the gasoline."

"I haven't thought about that," said Jennie. "Everybody's been so nice to me—I want to give as well as receive."

"Why," said Haakon, "you will yust begin to receive when your salary begins in Yanuary."

"Oh, no!" said Jennie. "I've received much more than that now! You don't know how proud I feel. So many nice men I never knew before, and all my old friends like you working for me in the convention and at the polls, just as if I amounted to something."

"And you don't know how proud I feel," said Haakon, "to have in county office a little girl I used to hold on my lap."

Haakon was a rather richer man than the colonel, and not a little proud of his ascent to affluence. A mild-spoken, soft-voiced Scandinavian, he was quite completely Americanized, and his influence was always worth fifty to sixty Scandinavian votes in any county election. He was a good party man and conscious of being entitled to his voice in party matters. This seemed to him an opportunity for exerting a bit of political influence.

"Yennie," said he, "this man Yim Irwin needs to be lined up."

"Lined up! What do you mean?"

Avoiding the Trap.

"You've known her since she was a little girl, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"How old would you say she is?"

"My dear, I can't tell you exactly, but I'm sure she can't be a day over twenty-two."

Lincoln Was Not So Mild and Meek

Great Liberator Could Bare Teeth and Fight When Necessary

By PROF. B. J. CIGRAND, in Chicago Evening American.

There is a tendency in recent writings to picture Lincoln so mild and meek that his red-bloodedness and his emphatic methods of rebuke are lost and the real value of the giant among men is destroyed.

Several recent biographies and many orations and magazine articles of late years have given the impression that Lincoln was not master of his cabinet. It is said he often laughed and told stories when his serious opinion was needed.

If any president endured intrigue at the cabinet board, Lincoln did. Not a single other man who ever sat in the presidential chair would have permitted the bold, personal campaigning of his personal associates.

But Lincoln seemed to let these men go on, gradually disclosing not only to himself but the public their selfish personal ambitions and then at the right time and in an inimitable way he would grab the official by the coat collar and bring him back to the straight and narrow path of Lincoln ideas.

Lincoln's manner of dealing with men was entirely different from that of any other president.

He even "ran after" General McClellan and permitted offensive correspondence and no end of "slights" to come to light. But Lincoln, like an indulgent father, could, when the proper moment came, call a halt and take some of the officials "in the woodshed and dust their trousers."

Ultimatum to Plotters.

To show he was not intimidated, I give a copy of a letter which he read at a cabinet meeting during the time when Stanton, Chase and Seward were secretly condemning one another and suggesting removals so that they might all the better conduct their campaign to prevent Lincoln's re-election and seat themselves.

The letter reads:

"I must be the judge how long to retain in, and when to remove any of you from his position. It would greatly pain me to discover any of you endeavoring to procure another's removal, or, in any way, to prejudice him before the public. Such endeavor would be a wrong to me; and much worse a wrong to the country. My wish is that on this subject no remark be made, nor question asked by any of you, here or elsewhere, now or hereafter."

One day early in Lincoln's administration, Mrs. Lincoln said to him:

"It is common rumor about the capital that Seward and not you will be the president—that he will rule you."

He replied:

"I may not rule myself, but certainly Seward shall not. The only ruler I have is my conscience, following God in it, and these men will have to learn that yet."

At another time Lincoln was visited by a congressional committee headed by Thad Stevens, who burst in on Lincoln with the accusation:

"The way you are running this country is causing it to be approaching hell, and very fast."

Lincoln asked: "About how far from that place are we now?"

Stevens sharply replied: "I would say about a mile."

Lincoln smiled and replied: "About a mile—why that's about from here to the capitol." And everyone save Stevens roared.

Stepped Out of Beaten Path.

Seward, who had for years toiled to subordinate Lincoln, finally wrote to his wife: "Executive skill and vigor are rare qualities. The President is the best of us."

On July 30, 1863, Lincoln issued a public letter, designed especially for the soldiers and sympathizers of the Confederacy:

"It is the duty of every government to give protection to its citizens and especially those who are organized as soldiers in the public service. It is, therefore, ordered that for every soldier of the United States killed in violation of the laws of war, a rebel soldier shall be executed; and for every one enslaved or sold into slavery, a rebel soldier shall be placed at hard labor on the public works."

Promised Glory for All Officials.

I look upon this order as the least representative sentence in Lincoln's entire life story and doubtless it was inspired by the usages of war and came as a cabinet measure.

Another message to his cabinet shows how he guided them and constantly reminded them of broad patriotism. It reads:

"It will require the utmost skill, influence and sagacity of all of us to save the republic. Let us forget ourselves and join hands like brothers to save the republic. If we succeed there will be glory enough for all."

And Stanton, who, in the early days of the Civil war, said, "Lincoln is a fool, a low, cunning clown. The original gorilla Du Chaillu, the naturalist, wandered all the way to Africa in search of when he might have found it in Springfield, Ill.," later said when Lincoln was assassinated: "Lincoln is the most perfect ruler of men the world has ever seen."
